FOREWORD

The years will come to us
And dull our memory's first bright gleam,-
There'll come a day when we can't name
The finest pitcher on the team.
And so, to help our minds recall
Our games, our friends, the songs we've sung,
We've made this Yearbook which will keep
Our memories always young.

Last Will and Testament

We, the Seniors of Highland Springs High School, being of sound body and simple mind, do hereby, on this fourth day of June, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and forty three, revoking all former wills legally made by us, devise, will, and bequeath:

ARTICLE 1: To Mrs. Bonnet, the happy certainty that all the students who entered Highland Springs High School in 1938 have finally left it in peace.

ARTICLE 2: To Mrs. Wingfield, all of our plan sheets and a class that understands parliamentary procedure.

ARTICLE 3: To Mrs. Everett, a costume closet, properties room, and a personal, all-time, Lost and Found Department.

ARTICLE 4: To Miss Gills and Mrs. Suddith, as good an S. C. A. as we have had this year and something for the Victory Corps to do.

ARTICLE 5: To Miss Anderson, a clean gym floor and a class that will wear shorts.

ARTICLE 6: To next year's Physical Ed classes, our shorts.

ARTICLE 7: To Miss Castelvechi, the mythical "Junior Class" and any of our property, real or personal, that she may desire.

ARTICLE 8: To Pauline Grinko, Farrar Howard's privilege of being the loudest person in school.

ARTICLE 9: To Miss Simpson, a perpetuation of Tom Cox and Tommy Richardson and a foglight to enable her to see her way around in Pittsburgh.

ARTICLE 10: To next year's Government Class, our discussions and a new alphabet of more than twenty-six letters.

ARTICLE 11: To any two people whom the Junior Class may designate, Ethel Hartsook's and Delores Harris's positions in the girls' "Who's Who."

ARTICLE 12: To Miss Cavanaugh and next year's Pre-Aeronautics Class, a gremlin gun.

ARTICLE 13: To the Junior Class, our ability to "get around" the teachers and still get a diploma in June.

ARTICLE 14: To the freshmen, the library so that their present position will be legalized.

ARTICLE 15: To Mrs. Mann, a head of cheese and Mrs. Wingfield's stick of peppermint candy with which to catch her mice.

ARTICLE 16: To Janie Lee Robinson, Joan Wagner's privilege of coming to school one day in every six.

ARTICLE 17: To those who need them, all of the Seniors' lost articles, particularly fountain pens.

ARTICLE 18: To Rudy Griffith, something wild, woolly, and full of fleas—but what?

ARTICLE 19: To Mr. Berry, our heartfelt appreciation for identifying our rooms for us.

ARTICLE 20: To the students of Highland Springs High School, forever, the good times, good friends, and good teachers that we have had.

We appoint Mrs. Bonnet sole executor of this will.

THE SENIOR CLASS OF 1943.

Lawyer: Virginia Turner

Notary Public: Verda Sletten

Witnesses: Evelyn Keck and Bobby Hunter

Bright (?) Sayings

After working on a speech for two weeks, Nettie Cook asked, "Mrs. Everett, do we have to give this orally?"

Mrs. Wingfield: "Benny, Mrs. Bonnet wants to see you before you eat your lunch."

Benny: "Wants to see me?"

Mrs. Wingfield: "Yes."

Benny: "She must have made a mistake because she saw me yesterday!"

FARRAR: "This Pre-Flight book is just like a homing pigeon -- I've thrown it away four times and it has always returned."

Miss Castelvrecchi: "Quiet! I have the floor."

Betty Bowles: "May I step on it?"

Rudy: "What's Andrew's first name?"

Miss Simpson: "Frank."

Rudy: "I don't know any more than I did before."

Alma: "Miss Simpson, suppose I know three answers to the third question?"

Tommy: "You put down two, and tell me the other one!"

Sake Eckles: "Miss Castel, didn't we just read that paint is a preservative?"

Miss Castel: "Yes, Russell."

Sake: "Is that why women live so long?"

Ethel: (sitting in Mrs.

Everett's new "Kyar") "When the gas tank registers 'one-half', does it mean 'half-full' or 'half-empty'?"

Miss Simpson gave a history test one day, and one of the questions was to name the ambassador from China to the U.S. Ruby thought and thought, and finally put down -- "HAKAVALI".

The question was counted wrong, but Jimmy Prosser spoke up and said, "How do you know it's wrong? maybe she writes Chinese!"

Mrs. Wingfield: "Ruby, please repeat the quotation you just said."

Ruby: "Oh! ... you scared me ... now I've forgotten it."

Miss Thompson: "Frances, name the kinds of wild fowls."

Frances: "Birds, pigeons, chickens, and other wild animals."

Class History

Early in the fall of 1938, I came to Highland Springs High School in the pocket of a very new freshman. We were both a little frightened and excited in the midst of so many strange people. Soon we found ourselves in the auditorium where Mrs. Bonnet lined us up and divided us alphabetically, parting the best of friends with no qualms at all. When my friend and I reached his homeroom, I climbed out of his pocket, "shinnied" down the desk, and started out to explore the other freshman rooms. I was a very busy fellow those first few weeks trying to keep up with all my freshmen, because the people in the different homerooms never seemed to meet. Finally, however, some ambitious youngsters organized a delegation which they called the "Committee for Organizing the Freshman Class," and went at regular—or should we say irregular?—intervals to the office, setting forth in their most elegant phrases all the reasons why they should be allowed to organize. But since their actions weren't as elegant as their phrases, they pleaded in vain. Nevertheless, it was this year that a freshman, Farrar Howard, became School Reporter, one of the five major officers of the S. C. A. It was also this year that there were so many freshmen in the operetta—a good operetta, too. I helped the newspaper reporters collect material for their gossip columns and was very unhappy when the paper was discontinued the next year. I am a very sociable fellow, you see, and like to know all about people.

When my freshmen had become sophomores, they finally succeeded in organizing with Mrs. Everett as sponsor and Farrar Howard as president. The event of the year was our trip to Washington in May—the White House; the beautiful Washington Cathedral; and the simple and stately Lincoln Memorial; the tired but triumphant feeling on reaching the top of the Washington Monument; the Congressional Library, where we suddenly found ourselves lost and confronted by wooden bars; and then as a climax, the firing of the cannon and lowering of the flag as we drove into Arlington.

In my junior year, the first in a series of two, John Adams was our president and Miss McClure, our sponsor. It was then that we gave our first Junior-Senior Dance, after forcibly selling popcorn to finance it. I learned a lot about dramatics that year because so many of my juniors were in plays. At the end of the year, we elected the next year's officers—twice! First, when we thought we were going only four years, and then again when some of us decided to go five. Each class took with it its share of the officers already elected and added two new ones.

I, because I like school, went with the five-year group, which was in turn called "Whatzits," "Whozits," and, finally, just plain "Juniors" again. Our fourth-year sponsor was Mrs. Hughes, and our officers were Farrar Howard, Virginia Turner, Ethel Hartsook, and Elizabeth Pollard. Our class, which started out as eighteen people who wanted to go five years, gathered to itself, one by one, juniors who wanted to go only four. Our one ambition was to give a Junior-Senior Dance—with orchestra—if only to show the seniors that we could. We sold candy and coat hangers, earned the dollar given to the first class to achieve one hundred per cent membership in the S. C. A., baked and sold cakes, pies, cookies, and cupcakes, and—in December, with the aid of ever-green decorations—we triumphantly gave the Junior-Senior Dance. Two members of our class, Gladys Spence and Farrar Howard, were principals in the operetta; and the Junior-Senior Play, given in the spring, had six juniors in it. In June, we helped our second group of seniors graduate; and from the pocket of the first candlebearer, I sadly looked out on my original class—together for the last time.

And then—I was a senior, and things really began to happen! In rapid succession, our president changed from Farrar Howard—who became president of the S. C. A.—to Gladys Spence—who left to be married—to Delores Harris; our vice-president, from Delores Harris to Kitty Porr; and secretary, from Betty Jean Bowles to Ethel Hartsook. Only our treasurer, Nancy Marshall, and our sponsors, Mrs. Everett and Mrs. Wingfield, remained the same. I helped put on two plays this year—the Junior-Senior Play, AMERICA FIRST, and the School Play, PRIDE AND PREJUDICE—each of which had a large number of seniors in it. We had a grand time at the Junior-Senior Dance, and I pulled down the very first valentine when it was over. I yelled loudly at all the basketball games, and am sure that helped us to win the County Championship. I, with the class, was proud when Wales Christian and Roy Reams (with Roy as captain) made the County All-Star Basketball Team, and Tom Cox was given honorable mention. At the end of the year, I was very glad that I had taken pre-aeronautics when it was put in, because it enabled me to join the air division of our new Victory Corps. The Year Book was a source of headaches as well as a great deal of fun for me—getting ads, taking subscriptions, writing this, and helping the staff in all the ways I could. All too soon, graduation came. As I watched my seniors receive their diplomas, I felt very proud, and decided that maybe they had learned something in high school, after all.

From now on, I am going to be a very busy fellow because I'm going to have to keep up with all of the 1943 alumni, wherever they are and whatever they are doing.

Signed:

BUY
WAR BONDS AND STAMPS

During the six weeks period from March 15th through April 30th, 1943, students and teachers of Highland Springs School bought stamps and bonds which amounted to a total of $2044.80.

It's really been swell going through all my years of High school with you.
you have really helped me a lot.
Hope I can do the same for you.
Good Luck, Dawn.
